

Big Write – 25th May 2018

This week, your Big Write task will be to write a news report about a current incident. We will discuss the details of the incident on which you will be writing and plan together in class.

However, to give you an understanding of news report writing, your task is to read (or have read to you by an adult), watch or listen to some news reports. Such reports could be from current affairs radio or TV programmes (e.g. Newsround) and/or newspaper articles. Whilst reading, watching or listening, pay particular attention to the types of vocabulary used, what key information is included and how it is structured e.g. headline, brief introduction, chronological details, quote and closing statement.

Big Write – 25th May 2018

This week, your Big Write task will be to write a news report about a current incident. We will discuss the details of the incident on which you will be writing and plan together in class.

However, to give you an understanding of news report writing, your task is to read (or have read to you by an adult), watch or listen to some news reports. Such reports could be from current affairs radio or TV programmes e.g. Newsround and/or newspaper articles. Whilst reading, watching or listening pay particular attention to the types of vocabulary used, what key information is included and how it is structured e.g. headline, brief introduction, chronological details, quote and closing statement.